Resources for Adults with Disabilities

Thank you for contacting the National Information Center for Children and Youth with Disabilities, NICHCY. Our publications are designed to serve the needs of students, their families, and the professionals who work with them. Once a student leaves high school, other agencies are available to assist with putting the individual in contact with helpful resources.

We have prepared this listing of resources for adults to help you get started. Look over this list, and you will find organizations that provide information, referral, and/or direct services on:

- employment issues;
- problems that individuals with disabilities may have in the workplace;
- recreation;
- accessibility and accommodations;
- assistive technology that can help persons with disabilities function more effectively at home, on the job, and in the community; and
- independent living.

While there are many other organizations available that provide information or referral, they primarily do so to parents, schools, or service providers; we have chosen the organizations listed here because they can respond to the questions, concerns, and needs of individuals with disabilities themselves. A brief description of each organization's activities is included to help you choose those organizations that seem appropriate to your needs.

We hope that this listing is helpful to you. If NICHCY can be of further assistance, please give us a call.

Organizations and Agencies to Contact for Further Assistance

You will find a NICHCY State Resource Sheet enclosed in this package. Check the back of the sheet for disability organizations that might address your needs. The State Resource Sheet lists state offices, such as the Protection and Advocacy Agency, the Developmental Disabilities Council, and selected disability organizations. Any of these groups may be able to help you directly or give you the telephone number of a local chapter or office near you. Disability groups usually serve both children and adults and are a good place for referral to sources of further education, job training, financial assistance, living arrangements, and the like. If you don't see a group that meets your needs, please call NICHCY again, and our information specialists will try to connect you with an appropriate group.

Listed below are selected agencies concerned with the well-being of people with disabilities. These organizations are grouped by the main focus of their activities, as follows: employment issues, postsecondary education, independent living, recreation, assistive technology, and other.

Employment

Department of Vocational Rehabilitation (VR)

Consult your local telephone directory for the office in your vicinity.

Start by calling the local Department of Vocational Rehabilitation (VR) listed in your phone book. VR is a nationwide federal-state program for assisting eligible people with disabilities to define a suitable employment goal and become employed. Each state capital has a central VR agency, and there are local offices in most states. The VR is an excellent place for a youth or adult with a disability to begin exploring available training and support service options.

Americans with Disabilities Act

Regional Disability and Business Accommodation Center

For information on legislation, rights, and resources call: (800) 949-4232 (Voice/TT). You will be referred to the regional office for your state. The regional offices provide information and technical assistance to employers and to persons with disabilities to facilitate appropriate implementation of the ADA, successful employment outcomes for individuals with disabilities, and greater accessibility in public accommodations.

(202) 707-0744 (TT)

Individuals who cannot hold, handle, or read conventional printed material may be able to borrow, free of charge, full-length braille and "talking books" (books on tape) from NLS. First, however, they must establish their eligibility for the program. Call or write NLS and ask for an application form for persons with disabilities. The national book collection includes magazines and more than 55,000 titles of bestsellers, classics, romances, mysteries, science fiction, history, biography, religion, how-to-do-it books, and so on. Playback equipment is loaned free while library materials are borrowed. All postage is free.

Recording for the Blind (RFB)

The Anne T. Macdonald Center
20 Roszel Road
Princeton, NJ 08540
(609) 452-0606

RFB is a nonprofit service organization that provides educational and professional books in accessible format to people with blindness, visual impairments, and physical and perceptual disabilities that prevent them from reading normal printed material. This includes individuals who are no longer in school but who are using educational books to pursue careers or personal interests. RFB also accepts requests to tape books that are not already contained in its Master Tape Library. To become a lifetime member of RFB, you must complete an application form for service (which contains a "disability verification" and "certification") and include a one-time registration fee of $25. An application form is available from RFB's Customer Services Department at 1-800-221-4792.

Independent LivingAccent on Information (AOI)

Gillum Road and High Drive
P.O. Box 700
Bloomington, IL 61702
(309) 378-2961

ACCENT on Information is a computerized retrieval system containing information on products and devices which assist persons with physical disabilities. Also available is other how-to information on such topics as: eating, bathing, grooming, clothing, furniture, home management, toilet care, sexuality, mobility, and written and oral communication. For a nominal charge, a search of AOI's database is made on your topic of interest. You will then receive up to 50 of the most recent citations for each search. AOI has two sister services: (1) ACCENT on Living Magazine, and (2) ACCENT Special Publications, which publishes and distributes a variety of books of interest to persons with disabilities, along with a Buyer's Guide that lists equipment devices to assist persons with disabilities in daily living activities.

The Center's goal is to develop and disseminate practical techniques that enable people with severe disabilities to live more independently. This includes service delivery systems, skill training methods, and effective techniques to improve human services and community support for people with disabilities. The Center provides training and technical assistance to individuals and organizations throughout the U.S.

Social Security Administration (SSA)

Department of Health and Human Services
Baltimore, MD 21235
(800) 772-1213

The Social Security Administration provides cash benefits (SSI and/or SSDI) to persons with a physical or mental disability which prevents them from working and which is expected to last at least a year or result in death. The amount of money received varies in each state. Eligibility for SSI or SSDI may mean eligibility for other services, such as Medicaid, food stamps, or other social services. The program also includes work incentives that make it possible for individuals to work without an immediate loss of benefits. For details, contact either the above 800 number or your local SSA office.

Assistive Technology

Alliance for Technology Access (ATA)

1128 Solano Avenue
Albany, CA 94706
(510) 528-0747
(800) 992-8111

The Alliance for Technology Access (ATA) is a growing coalition of technology resource centers across the country that provide information, awareness, and training in the use of microcomputers to aid children and adults with disabilities. Services range from hands-on workshops to training for professionals, from guided problem-solving to technical assistance to families, individuals with disabilities, employers, and agencies seeking access to technology. Also offered are lending libraries of computer software, assistive devices, print resources, training films, and adapted toys. Callers are referred to the technology resource center nearest them.

Apple Computer, Inc.

Worldwide Disability Solutions Group

Mail Stop 2SE
20525 Mariani Avenue
Cupertino, CA 95014
(408) 974-7910
(800) 833-6223 (TT)

Apple's Worldwide Disability Solutions Group has developed a wide variety of materials in print, video, and electronic form to describe how personal computers can constructively influence the experience of having a disability. Energies are directed toward ensuring that the power and promise of the microcomputer are available to individuals with a disability. The publication Macintosh Disability Resources lists adaptive devices and specialized software available to individuals with disabilities affecting physical mobility, cognition, speech, hearing, vision, and learning. The Solutions Group can also respond to individual requests for information.

IBM Independence Series Information Center
Special Needs Systems
1000 NW 51st Street
Internal Zip 5432
Boca Raton, FL 33431
(800) 426-4832 (Voice)
(800) 426-4833 (TT)

IBM's Independence Series Information Center serves to help health care leaders, agency directors, employers, educators, and individuals learn how computers can enhance the quality of life for individuals with disabilities in the home, school, and workplace. While the Center is unable to prescribe an assistive device or software, it does provide information on what technology is available. Information for persons with disabilities affecting learning, hearing, speech and language, mobility, and vision is provided, including vendor and support group names, addresses, and descriptions. IBM also offers a program in conjunction with participating community service organizations to make it easier for eligible people with disabilities to purchase selected IBM Personal System/2 products at a discount.

RESNA

1700 N. Moore Street, Suite 1540
Arlington, VA 22209
(703) 524-6686

An interdisciplinary association for the advancement of rehabilitation and assistive technologies, RESNA is an organization for rehabilitation professionals. It is concerned with transferring science, engineering, and technology to the needs of persons with disabilities. RESNA is currently operating a Technical Assistance Project, which can help callers identify the program in their state that is responsible for providing information, training, and technical assistance on assistive technology to individuals with disabilities.

Technical Aids and Assistance for the Disabled Center (TAAD)
1950 West Roosevelt Road
Chicago, IL 60608
(312) 421-3373
(800) 346-2939

TAAD is an organization created by the Committee on Personal Computers and the Handicapped (COPH-2) to provide options in using personal computer technology to persons with disabilities. The TADD Center provides advocacy and services with an emphasis on selection and application of microcomputers. The center's approach allows users to make informed decisions as to which system or devices best meet their needs. Other services include equipment loans, workshops and product demonstrations, and advocacy before manufacturers. TADD can also refer callers to their local resource center of the Alliance for Technology Access.

Trace Research and Development Center

S-151 Waisman Center
1500 Highland Avenue
Madison, WI 53706
(608) 262-6966 (Voice)
(608) 263-5408 (TT)

The Trace Center was formed in 1971 to address the communication problems faced by nonvocal children and adults with severe disabilities. The Center is primarily concerned with research and development in the areas of augmentative communication (conversation and writing) and computer access for persons with physical disabilities. The Center does not manufacture or distribute equipment, but will make referrals to specific sources of information regarding equipment, software, service centers, related professionals, and other information networks. This is possible through the Center's database, hyper-ABLEDATA, which houses information on 17,000 assistive devices for individuals with disabilities. Publications include the Trace Resource Book, a reference volume listing and describing currently available products for communication, control, and computer access for persons with disabilities. All information is available in alternative formats for individuals unable to read or handle print materials.
